Activity: Decisions in Postwar America: Remembrance of our Nation’s Fallen Heroes

Guiding question:
What options did families have in honoring the loss of loved ones after World War II and what were the costs of these options?

DEVELOPED BY CHRIS JOHNSON
Grade Level(s): 9-12
Subject(s): Social Studies
Cemetery Connection: Luxembourg American Cemetery
Fallen Hero Connection: Staff Sergeant Charles F. Simcox
Overview
Students will have an opportunity to understand the choice American families had regarding the burial of servicemembers lost in World War II. After introducing students to the options available to families of those killed during the war, students will consider the pros and cons of different options. Then they will look at primary sources from the era to help them consider the choices available and why families made the choices they did. Finally, they will see what information exists today to help them evaluate the relative options in hindsight.

Historical Context
World War II cost the lives of more than 400,000 Americans. For those who died in World War II for whom remains could be found and identified, families had a choice between repatriation of their loved ones’ bodies for burial in national or private cemeteries in the United States or burial overseas at an American military cemetery. For servicemembers who immigrated to the U.S., families could choose to have the remains returned to a home country. This was an important and difficult choice for next of kin. However, this decision allowed them the choice to honor the sacrifice of Americans in the lands they helped to liberate in the 1940s.

Objectives
At the conclusion of this lesson, students will be able to

- Identify the various costs and benefits involved in the burial of U.S. Armed Forces personnel in Europe following World War II; and
- Empathize with the difficult decision next of kin had to make regarding the disposition of remains of Americans who were lost in the war.

“A commonly used U.S. History textbook tells us that ‘only the Civil War involved a comparable commitment of military service from a generation.’ When determining the final resting place of their loved ones, families made an important choice that helped our nation remember the sacrifice of Americans who died far from home.”

Activity: Decisions in Postwar America: Remembrance of our Nation’s Fallen Heroes

Procedure

Activity One: Introducing the Decision: Service and Sacrifice (5 minutes)
- Ask students, When discussing World War II, a U.S. history textbook author mused that “only the Civil War involved a comparable commitment of military service from a generation.” How do you react to this statement?
- Lead a discussion and push students to reflect on what sacrifices World War II entailed for the American people.
- Ask students to consider what tasks were necessary for government and the people at the end of the war (burial of the dead and memorialization).
- Conclude this part of the lesson by asking students to brainstorm benefits and drawbacks of overseas burial.

Activity Two: Memory from the Home Front (10 minutes)
- Clarify for students the four options available to next of kin. Remind students that practices for World War II were similar to that of World War I, but different from the Civil War and conflicts since World War II.
- Make available to students information consistent with what next of kin had available in the World War II era. This will help students understand what difficulty they might have had making such a decision. Teachers can make any or all of the following information available for students to examine and discuss:
  - Share images of one or two ABMC World War I cemeteries, reminding students that such cemeteries would be examples the next of kin at that time would likely be aware. The ABMC website makes such photos available. Recommended cemeteries include Meuse-Argonne American Cemetery and Flanders Field American Cemetery.
  - Share images of one or two national cemeteries, reminding students that fallen heroes from World War I were also buried at home in national cemeteries and that families would have known of these.
- Lead students in dialogue about the benefits and drawbacks for burial overseas from the families' point of view.
- Conclude this part of the lesson by engaging in dialogue with the students about what families most often chose. Ask:
  - The majority chose repatriation. Why might that have been the case?
  - What does this help us understand about the sacrifice made by those who chose overseas interment?
Activity Three: Decision (30 minutes)

- Introduce 1946 short film, Decision. Establish context by identifying year of production (1946) and authorship (the U.S. War Department).
- Play the film.
- Debrief from video. Encourage discussion regarding the following topics:
  - Why did the creators of this film choose the characters in this film?
  - What elements of the story or characters seem realistic to that time period?
  - Is there a choice students perceive the film wants its audience to take?
- Share summary with students regarding what families chose to do. Majority of families with the choice opted for repatriation. Also, share figures about cost to the U.S. government for repatriation as well as overseas burial.
- Turn the discussion to the role of the cemeteries today. Lead a discussion regarding the benefits and drawbacks of these memorials today.
  - How did the families who chose to have their loved ones interred here contribute to the memorialization of the war and America’s contributions to victory?
- Ask students to revisit the benefits and drawbacks identified in the first part of the lesson. How has the passage of time changed or modified the answers on that list?
- Ask students to reflect on what role the cemeteries overseas have in honoring the service and sacrifice of the nation in World War II. Also, ask students to consider the role families back then played in shaping memory of the war today.

Assessment

- Assign students to select one of the following questions to respond to in written form. If preferred, teachers can select a question based on the level of his/her students.
  - What decision might you have made if you were next of kin to a fallen hero in World War II?
  - Might families have made different decisions regarding burial overseas if they knew what these cemeteries serve as today?
  - What is the most important role our nation’s overseas cemeteries play today?
Methods for Extension:

- Teachers can use the video commentary featuring Dr. Christopher Hamner found on the ABMC Education website to assist with analyzing the film, Decision.
- Teachers can enhance students’ interest in the role of cemeteries and memorialization by exploring these related lesson plans on ABMCEducation.org:

  - Design a Battle Monument
  - Sacrifice, Loss and Honor: A Simulation of the Homefront in World War II

Adaptations:

- Teachers can focus more on visual or textual sources based on the needs of their students.
- Teachers can turn the final assessment into a presentation or podcast if desired.

Options Available to Families:

- Burial in a permanent American military cemetery overseas.
- Repatriation: Return of remains to U.S. for burial in a private cemetery or in a national cemetery.
- Return of remains to a foreign country which was the homeland of the deceased or next of kin.
- These options are very similar to those available to next of kin in World War I.

Legislation Regarding Repatriation:

- Signed into law in 1946
- Allowed for repatriations until end of 1951
- Cost: $200 million
- Each repatriation cost an estimated $700.00
- Families could have as much as $50 of burial cost paid for by U.S. government

The Burial of Our Fallen Heroes:

- There are 14 ABMC commemorative cemeteries for World War II dead. Six of them are in France. Two each are in Belgium and Italy. Britain, Luxembourg, the Netherlands, the Philippines, and Tunisia each have one.

- Facilities at military cemeteries include a chapel, memorials, and often murals, mosaics, maps, and other artwork that interpret the course of the war in the region in which the cemetery is located and honor the fallen.
- In fiscal year 2018 the agency’s total expenditures equaled $87.6 million.
Chapter XI

AMERICAN MILITARY CEMETERIES
IN EUROPE

There are eight permanent American military cemeteries in Europe. These have been developed by the United States Government into places of distinguished beauty and no American Cemetery. The other American cemeteries are located on the battlefields of France and Belgium and have been included in the tours described in this book. The cemeteries were originally established by the War Department. They are now (1937) under the jurisdiction of the American Battle Monuments Commission, which has erected in each one an appropriate memorial chapel and has added the additional architectural and landscape features necessary to make all of them outstanding in beauty and dignity.

"American Military Cemeteries in Europe," Page 458

The development of each cemetery is formal in character and this formality is emphasized by the regular rows of white marble headstones which mark the graves of the soldiers buried there. The headstones are of two designs, a cross for those of the Christian faith and a six-pointed star for those of the Jewish faith.

Every soldier now buried in an American military cemetery who lost his life during the World War and whose body has been identified has his name, rank, organization, state and date of death carved on the headstone over his grave. These men are called the “known dead” to distinguish them from the “unknown dead” whose bodies have not been found or, if found, have not been identified.

With one exception, all “unknown dead” whose bodies have been found are now buried in the cemeteries in Europe, each resting in a separate grave marked with a headstone bearing the following inscription: “HERE RESTS IN HONORED GLORY AN AMERICAN SOLDIER KNOWN BUT TO GOD”. The single exception is that of the “Unknown Soldier” who was buried in a superb tomb bearing the same inscription at the Arlington National Cemetery near Washington, D. C. This soldier, selected from the unidentified dead of the A. E. F., was returned to America and buried with full military honors at this national shrine, where, as the representative of his comrades, he receives daily the homage of a grateful people.

The “unknown dead” whose bodies were not found consist mainly of soldiers who were buried hurriedly during battle without suitable markers on their graves or with markers which were obliterated by shellfire, men who were blown to pieces by high-explosive shells, and prisoners who died without their identity being recorded. Through the misfortunes of war these men have thus been denied the honored burial which has been given to their comrades in death.

Others who have no identified graves are the soldiers and sailors whose resting place is the sea. This group includes men who died at sea and were buried there, as well as those who lost their lives at sea due to the action of the enemy.

The Commission early decided that each of these “unknown dead” should have his name, rank, organization, state and date of death inscribed in one of the chapels in the American cemeteries in Europe. As a result, in the chapel of each battlefield cemetery are inscribed the names of the “unknown” soldiers who lost their lives in that region. In addition, on panels of the chapel in the Meuse-Argonne Cemetery are recorded the names of the “unknown dead” of the...

This is the largest and most impressive American cemetery in Europe. It contains 14,240 graves. Most of those buried here gave their lives during the Meuse-Argonne offensive, the greatest battle in all American history.

The cemetery is located just in rear of the Hindenburg Line in a small valley between Romagne and Cunel. Its size and the harmony of its architectural development make it rank high among the beautiful cemeteries of the world. The immense field of white marble crosses arranged in long regular rows on the sloping hillside, with the chapel silhouetted on the crest above, is a sight which, once it is seen, will not quickly be forgotten.

A more complete description of this cemetery is given on pages 247–248.

A hostess house, which has facilities to provide rooms and meals for a limited number of visitors during the summer months, is now maintained at the cemetery for the convenience of the relatives of the men who are buried in the cemetery.

The cemetery is about 18 miles northwest of Verdun, which is a tourist center and easily reached by train. Good hotel accommodations are available in the city and automobiles can be hired there. Both the cemetery and the Meuse-Argonne American memorial on Montfaucon are included in most of the regular tours of the battlefields which start from Verdun.

"American Military Cemeteries in Europe," Page 462

ON a battlefield where many of America’s bravest sons met their death, near Fère-en-Tardenois, is located the Oise-Aisne Cemetery, the second largest American cemetery in Europe. It contains 6,012 graves. The majority of the battle dead who sleep there are from divisions which fought in the vicinity and to the north as far as the Oise River. In 1922 a considerable number of bodies were moved to this cemetery from the general area to the southwest of Paris.

The quiet surroundings now give no indication of the conflict that raged in this region while American soldiers were fighting here for the Ourcq River heights. The cemetery itself is a peaceful harmony of landscaping and architecture. The pink and gray sandstone chapel and walls give color at all times but perfection is reached in the spring when the roses and flowering shrubs are in full bloom.

The cemetery is about 14 miles from Château-Thierry and Soissons and slightly more from Reims. Good train service is available to each of those places, where hotel accommodations can be obtained and automobiles hired. The main railroad line between Paris and Reims passes close to the village of Fère-en-Tardenois.

For further information concerning this cemetery and its features see pages 75–76.

The American cemetery near Belleau and the American memorial on Hill 204 just outside of Château-Thierry are each about 14 miles away to the southwest.

"American Military Cemeteries in Europe," Page 463

ST. MIHIEL CEMETERY NEAR THIAUCOURT

THIS is the third largest of the American military cemeteries in Europe and contains 4,152 graves. It is located on ground restored to France, after more than four years of German occupation, by the great offensive of the American First Army which resulted in reducing the St. Mihiel salient.

The cemetery contains many works of art and architecture in commemoration of those who died on this field of honor. The interior decorations of the chapel and museum, which include an inlaid marble map picturing the American fighting in the vicinity, are of special interest. For a more complete description of this cemetery and the features located in it, see pages 147–149.

The American memorial on Montsec, commemorating the St. Mihiel operation and other American fighting in the region, is 8 miles to the southwest and can be seen from the cemetery on a clear day. The cemetery is less than 26 miles from Nancy, Verdun, and Metz. There is good train service to these places, and at each of them hotel accommodations are available and automobiles may be hired. Thiaucourt is on the main railroad line between Paris and Metz and a few of the trains stop there. The town is four hours by train from Paris. There are, however, no good hotels at Thiaucourt.

"American Military Cemeteries in Europe," Page 464

This cemetery lies at the foot of the hill upon which stands Belleau Wood. It contains 2,288 graves, mainly those of American soldiers who fought in the near vicinity or in the Marne River valley. The imposing chapel standing against the hillside is of French Romanesque style of architecture. The natural setting of the cemetery and chapel, and the perfection of detail of the architectural and landscape development, all combine to give this historic spot an atmosphere of exceptional beauty and dignity.

The cemetery is 45 miles from Paris and about 3 miles northwest of Château-Thierry, which is on a main railroad line running east from Paris. Fair hotel accommodations are available at Château-Thierry and automobiles for a visit to the battlefields may be hired there.

A more detailed description of this cemetery is given on pages 49–52. A visit to the cemetery will give the tourist an opportunity to see Belleau Wood, which adjoins the cemetery, and the Aisne-Marne American memorial which is on a hill above Château-Thierry.

"American Military Cemeteries in Europe," Page 465

THIS cemetery, located about halfway on the road between St. Quentin and Cambrai, is just southwest of Bony and contains 1,893 graves. Its style of architecture expresses the spirit of rugged determination which inspired the American soldiers in their repeated assaults across the neighboring fields while advancing to attack the Hindenburg Line in front of Bony.

The men buried here are mainly those who lost their lives while serving with the British Armies in France or in the operations of the 1st Division with the French Army near the town of Cantigny.

The chapel is remarkable for its cross-shaped window of crystal glass above the altar, the harmony of its interior decorations, the beauty of its bronze doors and its interesting carved exterior decorations.

The cemetery is about 9 miles north of St. Quentin, which can be reached by train from Paris in two hours. Hotel accommodations are available and motor transportation may be hired there.

For a more complete description of this cemetery consult pages 387–388.

The American monument north of Bellcourt which commemorates the services of all American troops who fought with the British Armies in Europe during the World War is one mile away to the southeast.
ON the slopes of Mont Valérien, 5 miles from the heart of Paris, is located the Suresnes Cemetery containing 1,541 graves. The men buried there are mainly those who died during the World War in hospitals located in Paris or at other places in the Services of Supply.

The cemetery is entered through an ornamental, wrought-iron gateway, and paths lead from it directly to the impressive chapel of an early colonial design. From its site against the steep wooded hillside, the chapel looks out over the fields of white marble headstones, and from its terrace a fine panorama of a large part of the city of Paris is obtained.

Inside the chapel is an artistic marble altar flanked by large marble urns containing green shrubbery. The effect of these is heightened by the beautiful mosaic above them depicting the Angel of Victory laying a tribute upon the tombs of the soldier dead. The interior of the chapel is illuminated by a subdued light from six attractive stained-glass windows and on the walls are bronze tablets giving the names of American soldiers and sailors whose grave is the sea.1 Carved benches have been provided for meditation and prayer.

Nature has aided with a generous hand the careful planning which created this peaceful resting place and a visit to honor these soldier dead is recommended when the trees and shrubs are in flower.

The reception building which contains facilities for visitors is located at the southern end of the cemetery.

The town of Suresnes can be easily reached from Paris by train, autobus or automobile. The cemetery is only about 200 yards from the main railroad station.

1 Additional names of those men who have no grave except the sea are given in the Brookwood chapel.

"American Military Cemeteries in Europe," Page 467

Flanders Field Cemetery Near Waereghem, Belgium

This cemetery, located about halfway between Brussels and Ypres, contains 368 graves. The men who rest here are mainly those who gave their lives during the American fighting in Belgium. The beautiful chapel at the center of the cemetery is surrounded on four sides by the fields of white marble headstones. The landscaping gives an impression of quiet harmony and the whole development forms a fitting resting place for the American heroes who are buried at this place.

Additional information concerning this cemetery and the features in it is given on page 399.

The American monument in the town of Audenarde is 7 miles away on the direct road to Brussels.

The cemetery is 17 miles southwest of Ghent, 24 miles northeast of Lille, and 39 miles west of Brussels. The nearest railroad station, which is in the village of Waereghem, can be reached by fast train from Paris in approximately five hours.

American Cemetery Near Brookwood, England

"American Military Cemeteries in Europe," Page 469

Brookwood Cemetery near Brookwood, England

This cemetery, located near the village of Brookwood about 25 miles southwest of London, contains 468 graves. Adjoining it is a British World War cemetery in which are buried many of the dead from their colonial forces. Both of these burial areas form part of a very large and beautiful British cemetery that was established privately many years ago.

The American soldiers who rest in the Brookwood Cemetery were brought there after the Armistice, from various places throughout England, Scotland and Ireland, and comprise those members of the American Expeditionary Forces who lost their lives in Great Britain or its surrounding waters during the war. They include many of the victims of the S. S. evergreens which form a perfect setting for the chapel, a graceful building of classic design decorated with features of both religious and patriotic interest.

The interior of the chapel is of brown stone, soft in coloring. Small stained-glass windows, remarkable for the beauty of their designs, light the altar and the carved cross above it. On the walls are inscribed the names of American soldiers and sailors whose grave is the sea. Inlaid in the floor is a large bronze coat of arms of the United States; and high above the altar, carved in relief on the wall, is an eagle with the inscription below it.

With God is their reward

A visit to the cemetery can not fail to bring a feeling of satisfaction to the American visitor that these soldiers who died in Great Britain and who still remain there are sleeping in such beautiful, dignified and peaceful surroundings.

It is a pleasant drive by automobile from London to Brookwood, through an interesting part of England, and a round trip to the cemetery in this way can be made comfortably in half a day. Brookwood can also be reached by train in less than an hour from London. The railroad service is exceptionally good, trains running about every hour, and the American cemetery is only about 300 yards to the southwest of the railroad station.

1 Additional names of those men who have no grave except the sea are recorded at the Surmes Cemetery.

Option 3—
The remains be shipped within, or returned to a foreign country, the homeland of the deceased, or next of kin, for interment by next of kin in a private cemetery.

Option 4—
The remains be returned to the United States for final interment in a national cemetery. When this option is desired, the remains will be transported to the continental United States and interred in a national cemetery selected by the next of kin. Burial in the national cemetery desired is subject to availability of space therein.

Alternate Choice

If the options described above do not provide for your wish, it is suggested you submit your specific desire to the Office of the Quartermaster General for final decision by the War Department as to its legality and practicability.
